Brakes Give Way and Crowded Myrtle Avenue Trolley Dashes Down Steep Incline Into Car Ahead.

Fifteen men were injured, four of them seriously, in a five-car collision on the north raodway of the Brooklyn Bridge during the early in the rush hour to-day. Andrew Webb, of No. 431 Warren street, Brooklyn, crisor probably will die from the hurts he sustained, while William Wagge, James Maguinness and George Smith narrowly escaped fatal injuries.

The collision was a serial performance, beginning at the top of the incline just west of the Manhattan tower and extending clear down to the loops in the Park Row terminal. It caused a blockade that forced 10,000 men to walk across the bridge in the driving rain between 7 and 8 o'clock.
